

RNSG 1128: INTRODUCTION TO HEALTH CARE CONCEPTS

An introduction to concept-based learning with emphasis on selected pathophysiological concepts with nursing applications. Concepts include acid-base balance, elimination, fluid and electrolytes, genetics, immunity, nursing applications. Concepts include acid-base balance, elimination, fluid and electrolytes, genetics, immunity, infection, inflammation, gas exchange, perfusion, and tissue integrity. Sixteen lecture hours per semester

Credits: 1

Lecture Hours: 1

Lab Hours: 0

Clinical Hours: 0

CIP: 51.3801).

Prerequisites:

Admission to the ADN program.

Program: Associate Degree Nursing (RNSG)